

Hello Ms. Peterson,

As the CEO of Millennium Communications Group Inc. I am emailing you directly, as you were part of the MBI public meeting held on May 24, 2016 at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

I have serious concerns about the portrayal of my company both in the report commissioned by MBI and the subsequent remarks by Mr. Broder of Tilson last night. I had hoped that we put the Leverett project behind us, even though I am proud of the effort put forth by my staff and the staffs of local Massachusetts based subcontractors who contributed to this highly successful project.

Unfortunately, certain individuals in Leverett did not give a positive review of the project, even though the project was a success, perhaps because of their own interests or perhaps to cover up for the many shortcomings outside of the control of Millennium encountered during the project.

In any case, while it is not my style or intention to drag up the past, I feel that Mr. Broder presented such a lopsided review of my company and our abilities, I had no choice but to respond.

Attached, you will find three documents. The first (MBI reply) is our direct response to the MBI report issued May 4, 2016. There is no mention of this document on MBI's website, nor was it mentioned or handed out last night (as the original report was). In it we call to task a number of points made by either the MBI staff or Mr. Broder's company, including Mr. Broder's reference to the "counterclaim" by Leverett against our company. This counterclaim was again shown to you last night under the "Freedom of Information Act."

In light of its presentation last night, I have also attached our Demand for Arbitration against Leverett, which preceded the Leverett counterclaim. In it, you will observe just some of the challenges my company faced in trying to complete the project. Lastly, since it was also specifically pointed out last night by Mr. Broder, I am attaching the email chain discussing the utility racks, a far different view from what was presented last night.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Ron Cassel
